TUCKER'S DEAD LETTER TO HIS FATHER

"You Know I Die Innocent"—"We Shall Meet Again in Another World."

The letter written by Charles Louis Tucker to his father and mother shortly before he was electrocuted for the murder of Mabel Page, and which he requested should not be opened until he was dead, was delivered to-day at the house of mourning in Auburndale, where the dead body of the writer lies in his coffin.

In his last written words to his parents, read to-day at the side of his body, cold in death, Tucker protests earnestly, insistently, that he is innocent of the murder of Mabel Page. He tells of his love for his parents and tells them that they will be reunited in the world beyond.

The letters were delivered to Mr. and Mrs. Tucker by Lawyer James H. Vahey. Mr. Vahey himself did not know their contents. It was thought that if Tucker was guilty of the crime for which he was killed that he might confess in these letters. He did not.

"Louis is innocent," declared Mrs. Tucker at the side of his coffin and holding his letter in her hand. "He is innocent and he tells me so in this letter, as he would if he could speak to me."

Here is the letter:

Dear Father—I have just written a long letter to James, and I am going to include this letter in the same envelope. James will give it to you. I know this is an awful thing for you all, but I want you all to live and try to keep up all you can.

It is hard for you all to see me die this way. I know that you will all know that I die innocent, and, dear folks, there is some comfort in that. I will be brave and die like a man. It is an easy death, and you know, dear folks, we will all see each other again in another world.

We have all got to be taken away from each other some time, you know, dear parents, but it is hard for you all that I should be the first one.

I love you all so dearly, too. It is really hard. But try to bear up all you can. I will always think of you all in the next world, and it is a comfort to me, my dear parents, that I die innocent, and I know it will be a comfort to you all, too.

Mr. Vahey has done all he could to help me, and I thank him for it. James has been good and kind to me, yes, always. I will not speak of my things. You can do with them as you see fit.

I want to be buried near, so I can always be near you. I want papa to have my watch and the ring that our dear mother gave me, and I want him to always wear them. You can keep my rings, brother, and can do what you like with the other things.

Give Walter my dressing case and my clothes and the things that he wants and give his dear little wife, Inez, something, too, and auntie, and (A) something, too.

I can hardly write this letter my eyes are so full of water that I can hardly see to write.

God bless you all. As I have stated, we all have to leave each other some time, and, dear parents, as this is an easy death, try to keep up.

I know it is hard, but try to bear up all you can. Give my love to Florence and all of my dear friends.

God knows it is hard to leave them all in this way, but, mother and father, they will have some comfort in knowing that I die brave and an innocent boy.

I could keep on all day, but, dear parents, I cannot write any more. I feel so bad.

So I will have to stop. My love to you all. Your loving son,

CHARLIE.

P. S.—Mother, papa, please do not tell, try to cheer him up as much as you can, because you are stronger and you are so brave and good.

I have been through an awful lot, dear folks. Try to keep up. For my part, it is better to go this way than to be imprisoned for life.

I assure you, a prison is a very hard life. If I could get evidence that would free me, it would be different, that is, if I had my sentence changed to life imprisonment.

I am innocent and I cannot get evidence to prove, so I suppose, dear parents, I have got to be taken away from you all.

God bless you all. Your dear son, CHARLIE.

The letter is dated Charlestown, Mass., and is addressed to James H. Vahey, Tremont street, Boston, Mass., Kimball Building.

On the back of the envelope is written a little note in pencil by Tucker, reading: "To be delivered to my dear brother, father, mother, and sister."

FLORENCE ANDREWS, DEVOTED TO TUCKER.

This young woman, who left a sick bed in Nova Scotia to come and comfort Tucker's parents in their affliction, is the recipient of a letter written by the young man shortly before his death.

BRIDE MOURNS HUSBAND'S $1200 WEDDING GIFT DID 'RAFFLES' STEAL CROSS?

Placed by Mother in Secret Drawer Afternoon Before Wedding; Gone in Morning.

MATHEWS, Mass., June 12.—The mysterious disappearance of a $1,200 diamond cross, a wedding gift, on the eve of the marriage of Miss Dora Norton to William Whittier Morgan of New York has led to the idea that a valuable "raffles" has been at work in this place.

The valuable gem was supposed to have been placed in a secret drawer in the room of the bride-to-be, and it was said that no one knew where it was except the mother and daughter. Yet here anyone else could have extracted it from its hiding place neither the mother nor daughter has been able to explain.

Where Cross as Dress Was Fitted.

These are the facts as they were given out at the house where the couple were married on Saturday, minus the sixteen-carat diamond cross.

On Friday afternoon, a New York dressmaker, a Fairbank, was fitting the bride to her wedding dress, when particular friends of the Norton family were announced as callers. Miss Dora had the diamond cross about her neck. This was in her hands. There were also present her mother and a half sister, the husband of the dressmaker. Mother and daughter went down stairs to their callers, first placing the diamond cross in a secret drawer in a secretary in the room. They were alone.

The slight mother and daughter, who had placed the cross in the drawer, after the wedding ceremony, guarding the wedding gifts was called in.

It was about the wedding ceremony that the diamond cross was gone. The drawer had been opened, and the diamond cross was missing. A gold chain and other jewelry were in the drawer, but the diamond cross was not.

Both ladies searched high and low, but fruitlessly. Mrs. Norton was positive that she had placed the cross in the drawer. The groom was notified, but no one else. After the wedding ceremony, guarding the wedding gifts was called in.

The bride and groom, who had been with the family twenty years, had it as a matter of fact, the diamond cross was missing. The bride and groom, who had been with the family twenty years, had it as a matter of fact, the diamond cross was missing.

DENIES JOHN D. OWNS COLLEGE

CHICAGO, June 12.—Professor W. G. Hale of the University of Chicago, in his convention speech protested it is a false impression which has gone abroad that the university is a "Standard Oil" or "Hockaday" university.

"The impression has gone abroad," he said, "that the institution is dependent wholly upon the generosity of John D. Rockefeller, who as a matter of fact twenty-three of the twenty-eight buildings of the college community have been built by Chicago people and are owned by the board of the university, should be under the same direction."

PREUSSER JURY IS COMPLETED

UTICA, N. Y., June 12.—After fifteen hours' work in examining witnesses for the trial of "Dick" Preusser of Albany, charged with murder of Myra McWhorter, formerly of Boston, the last juror was sworn in at 12:30 o'clock this morning. At 6:30 all but one juror had been sworn, and Justice Higgins declared on a night session.

It is understood that Dr. Charles W. Preusser, an expert on mental diseases, will be a witness.

Yesterday Mr. and Mrs. Morgan, on board the boat, interrupted the proceedings and the effort to solve the mystery is being renewed.

GUARDING HIS OWN LIFE, EXECUTIONER LIVES AND TRAVELS IN SECRET MAN-KILLER DAVIS GOT WORST SHOCK KILLING TUCKER

For First Time in His Awful Work He Was Forced to Leave His Switchboard and Inspect Victim in Death Chair.

EDWIN FRANCIS DAVIS, who kills men at $150 a head, faced the most trying situation in all his sixteen years as an executioner when he turned on the current that ended Charles Louis Tucker's earthly existence.

This man is the State executioner of New York. Since 1888, when he was appointed in his position on the installment of the electric chair, he has probably executed about 100 men. He is experienced in the art, cool, calculating, an electrician of recognized standing.

Charles Louis Tucker was the fifth man to be executed in Massachusetts in the electric chair. At all five executions Edwin Francis Davis was the man stationed at the switchboard. He has been hired by the State. At the execution of Tucker, Davis, for the first time in his career, was unseated.

For the first time he was compelled to leave his station behind the switchboard, the station which he had taken without meeting a soul except the men of the prison, expose himself to the gaze of the witnesses of the execution, a thing he had never done before.

While the staring eyes of the witnesses alternated between his face and the limp form in the death chair, which had already been twice shocked by the death-dealing current, Davis examined the electrical apparatus, tested the electrodes of the head and the legs, and went back behind his screen to turn on the current for a third time with increased amperage. After the third shock Tucker was pronounced legally dead.

Was Deathly Pale.

Davis left the death chamber with the perspiration pouring from his forehead, deathly pale, almost limp. With hardly a word he gathered up the belongings which he always carries in a small black bag, turned up his coat collar and disappeared into the night. By the first train he was on his way to New York away from the scene.

Yet Edwin Francis Davis is known to be a man of nerve, a man who has never before been known to lose his grip of the situation when in charge of an execution.

Few men know this man of New York, who holds a position that no other man wants. He has no friends. He has been threatened many times. He has been cursed by men whom the law has given into his hands to kill. He knows that his life is never safe. Always he is armed. He travels only at night and never remains long in one place.

Doggedly Davis has clung to his position despite the friendships that is part of his life. He has little to say to any man; wherever possible he avoids all his fellows. In New York State he has two or three homes, that he may never have to live long in one place.

Should Davis, for some reason, give up his position the wardens of New York and Massachusetts prisons would not know where to look for a man to take his place. All of the improvements which have been made on the first crude electric chair that was put up in New York have been his design.

He has in mind, he has had for some years, a chair that will not require straps or fastenings of any kind. It is a chair in which the condemned shall sit and be instantly d. d. Then the presence of the State executioner will not be required.

In the prisons where the death chair has been established they have all the apparatus save that which insures the current passing accurately and correctly through the body. How it is done is a secret which Davis carries with him. It is in the little black bag which is his constant companion. Without the contents of that bag executions would be a hodge.

Davis is slightly under sixty years of age, but because of the horrors he has been through, the scene he has witnessed, he looks much older. He has killed both men and women. But he never left an execution chamber looking more haggard than he did at Charlestown after Tucker was dead.

This man has several hobbies. He studies constantly on the improvements and applies them to his calling. He is a student of the classics and Dickens is his favorite author. He enjoys the quiet life of a farmer, and as a cultivator of land he has been very successful. He has a wife who defends him but prefers not to talk of his trade. There are no children.

Has Never Failed in Duty.

It is said that within a few hours of the time set for the execution the prison officials are never certain that the electrician will show up. He has never failed them, however.

The first time he came to Charlestown, to execute Louis Storti, the greatest care was taken to keep his identity a secret. He was driven up to the prison a short time before the appointed hour. He got out quickly and entered the station, where he met the warden and was escorted to the death chamber. His departure was in the same secret manner. It was not even known where he remained over night while in the city. It was only by accident that he identified leaked out.

Davis will be in the city again within a month unless something unforeseen happens. He comes then to assist in the execution of John Schindler, the wife murderer, who dies in the electric chair during the week of July 8.

AFTER HIS CASH, NOT HIM, SAYS BROWN OF WIFE

Declaring that all that his family cares about him is the money he earns, Walter H. Brown created a sensation in the East Cambridge Court while testifying in the suit which his former wife, Mrs. Lillian M. Brown of Malden, has brought against his present wife, Mrs. Florence L. Holmes Brown of Providence, for the alleged alienation of his affections.

"I care more for them than they do for me! All they care for me is for what they can get out of me. They show that by their actions," he exclaimed.

Brown said trouble started when his wife began to complain of how he spent his time. She said he was running his business, and objected to his interest in other women. She also declared her objection to his smoking.

Brown denied he had ever "held hands" with any woman while living with his wife, that he had ever been in any way intimate with her or that she had ever become him to come over and visit her. He said he had been living there ever since he was married.

He said he was married to Mrs. Holmes at Providence on May 27, 1900, and because he could not marry in Massachusetts at the divorce obtained by his former wife, he had been living there ever since. He said his marriage would be illegal in this State.

Defendant, Mrs. Holmes-Brown, called by the plaintiff, denied ever getting "intimate" with Brown, and that she never said of Brown, "don't be kept himself deliciously innocent."

THINK OF THE SERVANT IN IT. When the judge is so much more effective.

R. DE KOVEN IN OWNERSHIP OF A SANATORIUM MINES URGED

NEW YORK, June 12.—Through the arrangement of his chauffeur in court this morning on a charge of exceeding the speed limit, it became known that Benjamin R. De Koven, composer and musical critic, is in trouble of a sanatorium in Westchester county, suffering from nervous prostration. While his condition is not considered grave, it is so serious as to necessitate a complete abandonment of all mental activities and his present isolation while undergoing the "rest cure."

How the Public
Will Laugh!

When the Legislature's Secret "Investigating" Committee Frings in its Little Pill of Whilwash

Having tried themselves in secret, the members of the lower House in the Legislature have decided to find themselves not guilty. Nobody with intelligence could have expected any other verdict. As pointed out in this newspaper recently by Attorney Hughes, who exposed the insurance frauds in New York, a self-investigation in secret is no investigation at all. Its chief purpose usually is to hide crime and make a serious prosecution impossible. If to do this had been the deliberate aim of the Committee on Rules, the present "investigation" could not have been more successful. Having exonerated themselves and rendered themselves immune, there is only one thing more for the committee to do, and that is to find the complaining witnesses guilty.

The Splendid Memory
of Michael Davitt

The Whole World May Well Honor It

Boston was one of the first cities in the country to honor the memory of Michael Davitt. The recent gathering in Faneuil Hall, called by numerous representative Irish societies, was a notable tribute to the dead patriot. It was a spontaneous gathering of Irishmen to pay homage to the name of one of the nobles of Erin's sons.

New York's recognition of his service to mankind will be not less conspicuous. It will be a tribute from workmen, just as Boston's meeting voiced the homage of Irishmen.

Organized labor—which means INTELLIGENT AND DEMOCRATIC LABOR—has been invited by Patrick Egan to meet at Carnegie Hall, New York, next Sunday night in honor of the dead leader.

Michael Davitt is in his grave, secure at last from the prison, from persecution, from suffering. And it may truthfully be said that he was among the men that helped to make the world better for his fellows by word of mouth, in action AND IN EXAMPLE.

Labor especially honors itself in honoring Michael Davitt, for he devoted his life to freedom, to human equality. His existence was one long struggle against the theory that certain men, fortunately born, inherit in the cradle the right to ride through life on the backs of other men.

And Davitt represents also the great progress that has been made in this world, THANKS TO THE DETERMINED EFFORTS AND BATTLES OF ORGANIZED LABOR.

The story of Michael Davitt, patriotic, uncompromising Irishman, is one that for consistency, courage and unselfishness has seldom been equalled in the history of his country.

Davitt knew well the bitterness of this earth. He knew what it means to a man to devote himself to the truth and to justice as he understands truth and justice.

From beginning to the end of the world was a hard abode for him. But while this world and its bad government put him in prison, there his arm from its socket and wore his health out while he was still a child IT COULD NOT MAKE HIM WHIMPER OR COMPLAIN.

When he was a child of ten the detestable English rule in Ireland, with its famine, its brutality, its hangings and shootings, had already driven him from home. At eleven years of age, working in an English cotton mill, his arm was caught in the machinery and pulled out of the socket. It was cheaper to rip a child to pieces than to make machinery safe.

When he was thirteen he was earning his living as a one-armed printer.

He went to prison over and over again because he would not stop protesting while his fellow-countrymen and women in Ireland were treated unjustly.

The best eight years of his life—from twenty-four to thirty-two—he spent in prison—BECAUSE HE WOULD NOT BOW HIS HEAD TO INJUSTICE.

He was sent to jail and he was sent to Parliament. The official documents sending him to jail were prized; and he had them framed in his house as proof of honesty. He accepted his election to Parliament as an opportunity to help his fellow-men. With that election to Parliament, there came, apparently, a better turn in his life—an opportunity to work as an old man in a useful field. But when war was declared against the Boers—a war, in his opinion, unjust—he at once resigned from Parliament to emphasize his protest.

This man may well be honored by all workmen, by all good men in this world.

He never knew any happiness in his life except that which comes from the performance of duty under difficulties. A life of very hard work—alternated by terms in prison—left him poor. He leaves nothing to his family.

But his will, simple and short, is a beautiful document, worth more than all the millions left behind by many a selfish man.

And to Ireland, the dear country for which he suffered imprisonment, poverty and sickness, he left "My undying prayer for her absolute freedom and independence, which it was my life's ambition to try to obtain for her."

The Trusts
Benevolent

By Wex Jones

The corporations which we sometimes thoughtlessly curse are the businessmen's best friends—Chancellor Day of Syracuse University.

SOMETIMES horny-handed Toil Sows hard things of Standard Oil;

Sometimes, too, the Packard's Trust By the Catheans is cursed; And the common working class Bristles at the name of Gas— Such mankind's unliking way, Says the worthy Doctor Day.

WORKERS should not "blame the Trusts"

That so kindly fling them crusts; Rather should they hail with glee All that aids monopoly— Every Trust that, inch by inch, Gets creation in a crouch, Helps to make the laborer pay, Says the old-fell Doctor Day.

RAILROADS charge the lowest fares, Packers sell the purest wares, Gas Trusts fight to cut their rate, Coal Trusts give us overlight, Oil Trust asks a living price, Same with Trust that sells you tea— Trusts make labor light as play, Says observant Doctor Day.

CORPORATIONS try to no Higher wages every day; Presidents can't sleep at night— Planning to uphold the rights Of the workmen they love Place and power and gold above— Thus we all should daily pray For the Trusts and Doctor Day.

Lasting Good May Result Even From Such a Catastrophe as the San Francisco Earthquake
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1906, by American Journal Examiner

UNDER such seeming evil there is always good," I said, "Out of every disaster grows, like plants from the mud."

"What good can possibly come out of the San Francisco horror?" asked the doubter.

And here are some of the things which men to answer the question.

First of all, the whole of America is brought to a sudden realization as never before of the instability of earthly possessions and the uselessness of giving all time, thought, vitality and purpose to mere accumulation of wealth or to the creation of earthly edifices.

Selfishness in these pursuits sees itself reflected in the mirror of life and shrinks from the spectacle.

Greed, lust, sensuality and crime have all been made to pause and think, as no united effort of the churches of the world could make them do. And that is good.

Next, the absolute unity of the human heart, in its impulses of sympathy and its sense of brotherhood in time of great universal suffering, and the utter forgetfulness of creed or class barrier, have given humanity new dignity and grandeur in its own right and in the sight of the universe.

Many Benefits

DIFFERENCE in social stations, different creeds in belief, differences in race—these things have made life painful and discordant in the world, but for the time being no man in America seems to think of any one of them. The only thought is "San Francisco suffers—let us help."

And this good, great good, out of evil.

Third, the glorious courage of the people of that stricken city is astonishing the world. Never in the history of the world has it been equalled. With death, ruin of homes, desolation and suffering untold all about, the people, poor and rich and high and low, are looking forward to the New San Francisco.

They are accepting the inevitable with a smile, and saying, "We have difficult work before us, but we can do it, and the new city shall be greater, more beautiful and safer than the old."

Such courage in the face of such calamity proves how closely duty to duty is tied, and that, too, is good, very good. The greatest good of all.

Still, again, the inventive minds of the world will be awakened and inspired to new discoveries.

When earthquakes have occurred in old countries far away, science has talked of them in general terms. But this great calamity in our midst will make the mind of science to understand more earthquakes than the world has ever known before.

Evil Becomes Good

It will open the inventor to create buildings which will withstand such shocks as obliterated San Francisco.

And whatever stirs the mind of man to new achievements, which benefit humanity, is good, very good.

And so I say, out of evil good must grow, since the whole trend of the universe is toward final good.

I am in receipt of a letter from William F. Love, No. 1517 Laguna street, San Francisco, Cal., who says:

"Before the recent catastrophe we had organized a local co-operative society here, and had thirty-three members enrolled. Now, the necessity for our efforts—to house the people—is accentuated, and so our movement has been increased by Mayor Schmitz, and we are striving through the Press and otherwise to get publicity, and thereby get the money for rebuilding the tens of thousands now homeless, most of them women and children, some of them infants in arms. If your heart inclines as yours pen will show, we will be glad to give this publicity."

Let all those interested in co-operation and benevolence send Mr. Love a small or large sum for his enterprise. It will be well bestowed.
